J. B. Smith.

The following memorial resolutions were adopted by Camp W. H. T. Walker, No. 925, U. C. V., Atlanta, Ga., at the regular meeting of the Camp on June 10, 1918:

"Whereas on the 17th day of April, 1918, it pleased our Heavenly Father to send his angel of death and remove from our midst our beloved brother and comrade, Past Lieutenant Commander J. B. Smith.

"Brother Smith was born in Campbell County, Ga., July 17, 1848, where he grew to manhood and was loved and honored by all who knew him. He moved to Atlanta sometime later, where he devoted most of his life in serving his Master and was a true friend to all.

"Brother Smith was a consistent and beloved member of Capitol View Baptist Church, serving as deacon in that Church for several years. He was loyal to the Confederate cause, serving as a true soldier in Glenn's Battery, 9th Georgia Field Artillery. He was a member of Camp W. H. T. Walker, No. 925, U. C. V., and was its first Lieutenant Commander for ten years. He was at all times ready to do his full duty to his comrades, who loved him with that brotherly love that reaches even to the grave; and while we will not hear his kind voice again nor see his face here, we will some day march with him on that golden shore of God's eternal home.

"Resolved: 1. That we, Camp W. H. T. Walker, No. 925, U. C. V., will miss our beloved brother and commander and mourn our loss.

"2. That we extend to his loved ones at home our love and deep sympathy in their sad hours, assuring them that we, as his comrades who loved him, bow our heads with them in humble submission to our Master's will.

"Committee: J. T. Reams, H. D. McCutcheon, J. S. Elder."

Thomas M. Gravely.

Thomas Marshall Gravely, son of Lewis and Martha Dyer Gravely, was born in Henry County, Va., in 1841, and lived at the old homestead until he went to Martinsville, some twenty-five years ago, where he lived several years before his removal to West Virginia in 1902. He was married, some forty-seven years ago, to Miss Georgia Stultz, a daughter of the late Capt. Zepheniah Stultz, of Henry County.

Major Gravely was a gallant Confederate soldier, commanding a company in Pickett's Brigade and serving throughout the war until he was taken prisoner and sent to Fort Delaware. He was among the six hundred prisoners taken from that fort to Morris Island and there confined for the remainder of the war. He was badly wounded in the battle of Chancellorsville and was present at the wounding of Stonewall Jackson on that famous field. After seven weeks' absence he recovered from his wounds, which were so serious that they were at first thought to mean his permanent disability, and returned to his command for further gallant service as a soldier and officer of the Confederate forces until his capture.

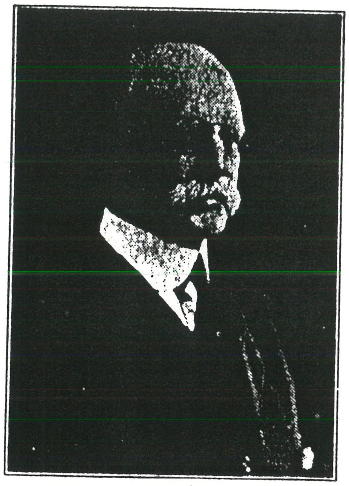
Major Gravely was a man of high integrity and manly qualities, brave in war and true to his obligations as a citizen in peace, faithful in all the relations of life, a devoted husband and father, and a loyal friend.

Otho Hayden, Sr.

Commander J. L. Rogers, of Camp Walker, U. C. V., Franklin, Ky., reports the death of Otho Hayden, Sr., and his burial in Greenlawn Cemetery on May 28, 1918. He was an ideal Confederate soldier, a member of Company G, 9th Kentucky Infantry, Orphan Brigade, and fought from the beginning to the end of the war. He was buried with military honors by Camp Walker, and his comrades laid him away with sad hearts, but buoyed by the hope of meeting him with the other heroes that have crossed to the other side of the river.

Dr. Robert C. Atkinson.

Robert Chilton Atkinson, M.D., who died at St. Louis, Mo., December 31, 1917, was born at Smithfield, Isle of Wight County, Va., on the 3d day of October, 1841. He was the son of Hon. Archibald Atkinson, well known as a statesman of Tidewater, Va., twenty years a member of the Virginia House and Senate, mayor of the ancient town of Smithfield, Congressman and lawyer. His mother was Elizabeth Ann Chilton, of Leesburg, Va.



DR. R. C. ATKINSON.

A Virginian to the core, Dr. Atkinson fought her invaders from the North with the same spirit that animated his ancestors, the Powells, Peytons, Harrisons, Chiltons, and Atkinsons, when they joined the Colonials in saving her from the savages and the Revolutionists when they had saved her from the selfishness of England and gained her independence as a State.

His family were conspicuous in the Confederate cause. Gen. Robert H. Chilton, chief of staff to Gen. Robert E. Lee, was his uncle; his only brother, Dr. Archibald Atkinson, was brigade surgeon under Gen. Jubal Early; his brother-in-law, Col. George D. Wise, was killed at the battle of Petersburg; and his aged father, Archibald Atkinson, gave most of a comfortable fortune to the Confederate government.

As a typical Confederate soldier of that incomparable Army of Northern Virginia, Dr. Robert C. Atkinson stood out in bold relief against the background of commercialism and self-aggrandizement so prevalent in his community and in the world at large. With conspicuous energy, courage, and aggressiveness for the aid of any person or cause exciting his interest, he combined a modesty, gentleness, and generosity of uncommon degree. His life was pure and his affections deep and genuine. All his early schooling and environment inclined his mind to classical thought and diction; but with all his love of the beautiful and heroic in poetry, history, and refinement, he had no trace of effeminacy, and in his professional life he was literally the man in the trenches. No cause was so hopeless as to justify surrender and no man so poor as to be beneath his best and promptest attention. He was always in great demand as a speaker.

As often happens with the most skillful men in the professions and arts, Dr. Atkinson was not a money-maker. He abhorred the idea of being in debt or of imposing upon any one. He never ventured in speculation and was so free and generous with his services and means that he accumulated little. His friends said that he was a most timid man about finances and that he must have taken the "vow of poverty."

Listed for first time on tithable lists, Lancaster Co., Va., in 1688; was not named on next extant list for 1691.

Sometime during the 1660's, he settled in Westmoreland Co., Va. and purchased 280 acres in the forest of Nominy, 24 November 1697. He made his home at a plantation on Currioman Creek, Westmoreland Co., a tract of land conveyed to him by Henry Ashton, 30 October 1700.

He sold 50 acres of the Currioman land to Philip Sanders on 26-27 December 1704, and on 25 August 1706, bought a 243-acre tract of adjoining land from Thomas Shadrack.

He deeded a slave to his brother-in-law, John Sharp of Lancaster Co., Va., on 26 December 1706. His servant John Tustin was ordered by the Cout on 30 October 1705 to serve an additional 491 days for having run away; Murta Brand was ordered on 26 September 1711 to serve an additional 310 days for having absented himself several times for a total of 155 days.

On 30 June 1709 he purchased of John Gerrard one-half of 900 acres called Currioman Plantation, thus doubling his Currioman holdings; on 16 May 1712 he received a grant of 375 adjoining acres; he acquired two more tracts of land in Westmoreland County, one of 163 acres in Washington Parish from John Kent on 24 October 1724, and 150 acres from Thomas Barnes on 10 April 1725.

A grant of 1,504 acres in the backwoods of Stafford County was made to him on 20 December 1714, but it lapsed for failure of payment to the composition; he also acquired other Stafford County land.

He was included in a Commission of the Peace, Westmoreland County, 31 March 1710/11; was sworn as a Justice on 25 April 1711; was sworn as a militia officer of Westmoreland County on 24 June 1724.

Inventory of his estate was made on 14 December 1726 and showed a total evaluation of Ł1,706 and included seven slaves, the ship "Currioman" and a long boat, numerous items of mercantile goods and personal items which indicate he home was one of opulence.

1723, m. Jemima Cooke, daughter (b. ca 1707)
of Mordecai Cooke of Gloucester Co., Va.

Thomas Chilton, son of John Chilton of "Currioman" inherited his father's home plantation where he lived until his death. He was charged with 1300 acres on the rent roll in 1740, Westmoreland Co., Cople Parish.

Thomas Chelton was named in a commission of the peace issued for Westmoreland County on 26 Apr 1733 and was sworn as a justice on 29 May 1733. He took the oath as Sheriff of Westmoreland County on 25 Aug 1741 after producing his commission from the Lieutenant Governor although the Council records do not record his appointment until 17 Oct 1741. He was church warden of Cople Parish in 1741-43. On 28 Aug 1753 he presented his commission and was sworn major of the Foot companies of Westmoreland County.

On 24-24 Apr 1737 he bought 192 acres on Neabsco Creek in Prince William Co. from Richard Crupper. He owned other land in Prince William County as well, for on 23 July 1753 a deed from Thomas Chilton to Thomas Machen was proved in court.

On 24-26 Oct 1742 he purchased a plantation in Westmoreland County from Richard Omohundro, but on 14 Oct 1761 he sold this 160 acre tract to Richard Moxley.

Thomas Chilton died in 1765 leaving a will dated 4 Sept 1765 and proved 24 Sept. 1765 in which he gave his son Thomas all his land in Westmoreland County. Land in Fauquier County was given to his three sons, William, John and Charles, John to have the part he then lived on. He gave his son Stephen Chilton land in Prince William County. Thomas Chilton was named executor.

She was b. 3 Apr. 1741.

William Chilton was a signer of the Westmoreland Resolutions against the Stamp Act on 27 Feb. 1766.
He inherited from his father land in Fauquier Co., Va., and settled it in 1768. On 21 April 1770, while still a resident of Westmoreland Co., he purchased an additional 200 acres from Robert Elliott. He subsequently moved to Fauquier County and died there.
On 27 Feb. 1775, administration on his estate was granted to Sarah Chilton and John Chilton.
His widow married (second) William Douglass of Loudoun County on 12 Dec. 1778. William Douglass qualified as sheriff of Loudoun County on 15 Nov. 1780 and on 13 Aug. 1781, but must have experienced difficulties in collecting taxes for he died insolvent in 1783. His will dated 3 June 1780, left a part of his plantation in Loudoun County on which he lived to his wife Sarah and named two sons and five daughters.
A division of slaves among the three children of William Chilton, Orrick, Susanna and William Chilton, was returned on 23 Sept 1793 and an accounting of the estate of the orphans, covering the years 1782-91, was made by their guardian Charles Chilton on 2 Aug. 1794.
The land tax books of Fauquier County charged William Chilton, deceased, with 492 acres until 1804 when the tract was transferred to Thomas Chilton.

Smithfield reflections

By Sig Dashiell

"Homestead" adjoins "Berry Hill" on the north, and for generations there were close family ties between the two estates. It is a portion of a patent of 1,350 acres of land on Seward's Creek and Goose Hill Creek, granted in 1637 to John Seward, merchant of Bristol, England, who died in Virginia. In 1672, his son John Seward, also a merchant of Bristol, sold to William Bressie of Virginia, "now residing in Bristol," land called Levy Neck in the County of Warricksquick.

William Bressie was one of the leading Quakers in the Colony, and when he died, in 1701, he left 2,000 pounds of tobacco to maintain "ye meeting House of ye People called Quakers lying at Levy Neck." And he also left to his kinsman, William Harrison (his sister's son) "the rest of the land purchased of John Seward." William Harrison's daughter Mary married Thomas Whitfield before 1750, and the above property on Seward's Creek (now Pagan River) and Goose Hill Creek then came into possession of Thomas Whitfield.

Whitfield died in 1781 leaving his property to his several grandchildren, one of whom was Mary Whitfield who, on June 28, 1799, was married to Dr. James B. Southall, formerly of Henrico County. Mary's widowed mother, Catherine Whitfield, had been married in 1783 to William Davis who owned "Berry Hill," which they sold shortly thereafter to Capt. John Sinclair in exchange for 400 acres on James River near "The Rocks," and Capt. Sinclair's son, Thomas Sinclair, later married Catherine Matilda, daughter of William and Catherine Davis.

Mary Whitfield Southall died in 1812, leaving five children. Seven months after her death Dr. Southall was married to Mary Moore Todd, daughter of Capt. Mallory Todd of Smithfield. By this marriage he had several more children, but when he made his will in 1847 he requested that he "be buried in a plain pine coffin and deposited alongside my first wife on the ground reserved in the land sold by my son James to James C. Jordan." In the deed from Southall to Jordan, the graveyard of the Whitfield and Southall families "in the creek field" is excepted from the sale, and Dr. Southall's gravestone is still there — cut off now by the by-pass highway from the main property. The Southalls were prominent here for several generations, four of them having been practicing physicians in Smithfield and Isle of Wight County.

James C. and Adelaide T. Jordan had acquired "Homestead" in 1835 and in 1854 sold it to Archibald Atkinson of "Berry Hill," who then sold "Berry Hill" to his son-in-law, Dr. Joseph N. Atkinson, and moved to "Homestead." It is believed that the present dwelling house was built by Archibald Atkinson about 1860 — asquare, two-story frame house on a high brick basement, with a wide hall and four large rooms on each floor, but it is doubtful that he ever lived there for any length of time. He had been elected Mayor of Smithfield in 1852, and at the time of his death in 1872 was living in the large brick house on Church Street, that he had owned since 1837, and which is now the home of Mrs. Frank B. Simpson Jr. He had had a long and distinguished career of public service as a member of the Virginia House of Delegates and the Senate, and of the United States Congress. His portrait hangs in the Old Courthouse in Smithfield, a gift of his great-granddaughter, the late Marguerite Ramsey Tietjen and her husband, R. Wilber Tietjen.

In 1863, Archibald Atkinson sold "Homestead" to Octavius Carrington Goodrich, whose brother Joseph C. Goodrich would buy "Berry Hill" in 1870. They were the sons of Orran Goodrich and Martha W. Carroll who were married in Isle of Wight on Feb. 23, 1833.

Octavius C. Goodrich and his family lived at the farm until 1886 when he bought two lots on Church Street in Smithfield and built the mansard-roofed mansion that was owned and occupied by his descendants until 1973, and is still one of the town's outstanding Victorian houses. It is now the home of Dr. James E. Warmoth and Bruce E. Campbell.

"Homestead" was owned by the Goodrich family for about 80 years, and finally came to be known simply as "the Goodrich farm." It was bought in the 1940s by Mr. and Mrs. A.E.S. Stephens who used it as a summer residence and sold it a few years later to Bernard Griffin. It is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Griffin.

The Goodrich family has been in Isle of Wight County since 1654 when Capt. John Guttereidge was issued a patent for 350 acres of land, and his descendants have served the county through the years as vestrymen, justices, militia officers and burgesses. During the Revolutionary War one branch of the family remained loyal to Great Britain and because of their daring exploits as privateers and blockade-runners for the British, Capt. John Goodrich and his four sons, John, Jr., William, Bartlett and Bridger became widely known as "the notorious Goodriches."

All of their property was escheated to the Commonwealth of Virginia and they were officially declared traitors to the American cause, but when the war was over they were allowed to peacefully leave the country – under strict orders never to return.

A mural monument of white marble under the tower entrance to Topsham Church, Devon, England, bears the inscription: "In this vault under the family seat opposite this monument are deposited the remains of John Goodrich, Esq., a native of Virginia in North America, who departed this life November 1785, aged 63, and of Margaret, his wife..."

Atkinson first mayor of Smithfield

The first of the 20 citizens elected mayor of Smithfield was Archibald Atkinson, who held the office from 1852 to 1855.

Atkinson was a native of Isle of Wight, one of the outstanding citizens of town and county and already 60 years old at the time of his election. He had served as an ensign in the War of 1812, had been Commonwealth's attorney for the county, a trustee of the Presbyterian Church that was built in 1845, a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, served four years in the State Senate and had been a member of the United States Congress from this district.

So it may be that he was chosen to be the first mayor of the Town of Smithfield in acknowledgment of his many years of service to Smithfield, Isle of Wight, Virginia and the United States.

He lived until 1872, his home being the large brick residence on Church Street that is now the home of Mrs. F. B. Simpson Jr. A portrait of Mr. Atkinson hangs in the old Courthouse on Main Street, presented to the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities (Isle of Wight Branch) by his great granddaughter, Marguerite Ramsey Tietjen, the last of his descendants to live in Smithfield.

The next mayor (1855-1860) was Charles Benham Hayden, who had come to Smithfield from Norwich, Conn., in 1826, when he was only 9 years old. His mother, Mrs. Julia B. Hayden, conducted "Oak Grove Academy for Young Ladies" until 1854.

He was educated at the College of William and Mary, was one of the leading attorneys of the area and was a vestryman of Christ Episcopal Church until his death in 1883. He married three times and had 9 children, not one of whom ever married.

tle. They have many descendants, but none living here.

Dr. John R. Purdie finished out the war years as mayor, serving from 1863 to 1866.

He was born in Smithfield in 1809, the son of Dr. John Hybdman Purdie and grandson of George Purdie of Dumbarton, Scotland, one of the first settlers of Smithfield. He was educated at the University of Maryland and practiced medicine here for many years.

Purdie lived to be 89 years old and in his later years wrote down for posterity much that he could remember, or had been told by older citizens, about the people and history of early Smithfield. It had been his intention to give the history of each of the 72 lots that made up the original town, but unfortunately, was able to finish only 34 of them.

His original notebook, though lost in recent years, has provided an invaluable source of information, both genealogical and historical. He has no descendants living here now.

William D. Folk, who had served as a lieutenant with the local military company of the 19th Virginia Artillery from 1861 to Appomattox, was elected mayor of the town soon after returning home from the war. He was born here in 1838, a son of William and Sarah Ann Folk, who had come from Nansemond County and owned and occupied the house of South Mason Street that is now the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Shearin.

He was married in 1862 to Martha Nock Barradall, a widow, and in 1876 bought two lots on the river side of Church Street where he erected a comfortable Victorian residence, typical of the eclectic style of the period, with turret and Palladian window,

Dallas, Tex., is now serving as Smithfield's vice-mayor, the first woman to be elected to that position.

Folk served from 1866 to 1871, and again from 1884 to 1893. He died in 1914, and his descendants were prominent here for many years, but none are living here now.

Warren Van Deventer was elected to succeed Folk in 1871, and served three years. He was not a native of Smithfield or Isle of Wight, and apparently had not lived here very long when he was selected for this honor, as his name does not appear in the local census of 1860.

In 1869, he bought from Robert Whitfield's widow the old house on Church Street, known now as the Sinclair-Langhorne House, and with his wife Harriett, made his home there until he sold it to M. F. Langhorne in 1877.

He was a trustee for the Baptist

III) in 1848 and died there in 1915.

His wife was Emily Virginia Jordan. Their oldest daughter, Lucy Day, married Sen. Thomas S. Martin of Charlottesville, one of the most influential political figures of his day in both Virginia and Washington.

Day served as mayor from 1874 to 1882, and again from 1899 to 1905.

In 1882, Day was succeeded by J. Henning Nelms, the youngest mayor ever to serve in Smithfield, being only 22 years old when elected to office. He was born in Isle of Wight, a son of George Thomas Nelms, and was married to Ella Sue Gibbs in 1882 and was an attorney at law.

In 1884 he bought a part of the Atkinson property on Church Street and erected the house that is now the home of Frederick N. Eley. After the death of his first wife, he married a lady from New York, studied for the ministry, and became the rector of a fashionable Episcopal church in New York City.

After William D. Folk's second term as mayor, James Dawley Jordan was elected to the office and served from 1893 to 1899. Jordan's family had been in Isle of Wight County since 1623. He was a son of Josiah W. and Fanny Dawley Jordan, was born in 1845, and never married. He was a devoted member of Christ Church, a member of the vestry and Sunday school superintendant. He died in 1916.

Since 1900, mayors of the town have been: V. W. Joyner, 1905 to 1907; Dr. Leslie C. Brock, 1907 to 1927; Frank B. Simpson Sr., 1927 to 1943; J. Waverley Thomas, 1943 to 1950; Howard W. Gwaltney, 1950 to 1961; Rodham T. Delk, 1961 to 1964; Aubrey Adams, 1964 to 1969; Carl M. Beale Jr., 1969 to 1979; W. H. Sykes Jr., 1979 to 1980; and the present incumbent, R. L. Thompson.

Atkinson served well as statesman

Smithfield reflections

By Sig Dashiell

Archibald Atkinson of Smithfield was the ninth representative from this congressional district, and the sixth from Isle of Wight County.

In 1843 he unseated Dr. Francis Mallory, the Whig incumbent from Norfolk.

Atkinson, a son of James and Mary Atkinson, was born in Isle of Wight on Sept. 15, 1792, being seven years older than Joel Holleman who had previously held the office.

He served as an ensign in Capt. Hamilton Shield's company in the War of 1812, attended the College of William and Mary, studied and practiced law, and like nearly all of our practical politicians, served his apprenticeship in the Virginia House of Delegates. He retained his seat for only one term, 1815-17, and after a vacation of 11 years returned for three more years, 1828-31.

When Joel Holleman left the Virginia Senate in 1839, Atkinson succeeded him and remained for four years, 1839-43. From the Virginia Senate, he went to Washington and took the seat Mallory relinquished in 1843.

Atkinson was in the thick of the campaign of 1844 when the Democrats elected James K. Polk as president. But in 1849, when the Whigs were triumphant and Zachary Taylor became president, Atkinson declined to run again and the seat went to John S. Millson of Norfolk. While the country went Whig, this district remained Democratic and elected Millson as a Democrat.

Archibald Atkinson had married Frances Day in 1815, and their only child, Emily, became the wife of Dr. Joseph N. Atkinson of Smithfield. They have numerous descendants.

After the death of his first wife, Archibald married Elizabeth Ann Chilton, by whom he had seven children. It was through his efforts that Mrs. Julia Benham Hayden came from Norwich, Conn., in 1826 to open a girls school in Smithfield that became well-known as Oak Grove Academy for Young Ladies, and whose name lives on in Hayden Hall and Hayden's Lane.

Atkinson was an eminent lawyer and was for many years Commonwealth's attorney for Isle of Wight, and was the first mayor of Smithfield when the mayor and council form of town government was adopted, serving from 1852 to 1855.

In 1837 he bought the large brick house on Church Street that is now the residence of Mrs. F. B. Simpson Jr., and made his home there for the rest of his life. He lived through the Civil War and the days of reconstruction, dying on Jan. 7, 1872. His wife's death followed in just three months, and they are both buried within the shadow of the Old Brick Church.

A portrait of Archibald Atkinson hangs in the Old Courthouse on Main Street, a gift of his great granddaughter Marguerite Ramsey Tietjen, and her husband J. Wilbur Tietjen.

~~Robert H. Whitfield of Smithfield was the seventh Isle of Wight man to be elected to Congress from this district. But in his case it was the Confederate Congress held in 1862-63. He was also a member of the Virginia convention of 1861, which passed the ordinance of secession.~~

~~Born in 1815, a son of Henry and Holland Whitfield, he was a lawyer in Smithfield and owned and made his home for about 25 years in the old house, now known as the Sinclair-Langhorne house, on Church Street. (Now the home of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Hines).~~

~~When a party of Yankees invaded Smithfield in 1862, Whitfield was taken into custody and threatened with imprisonment at Fort Monroe because he refused to take the oath of allegiance to the United States. But upon arrival of a senior Yankee officer, he was released.~~

~~He died on Oct. 8, 1868, and he and his wife, who was Rebecca Ann Peebles, are buried in the yard of the Old Brick Church.~~

~~By the close of the War Between the States and Reconstruction the political leadership that Isle of Wight had exercised in the district since the birth of the republic had come to an end. During the subsequent years only one citizen of the county, and he not a native, has aspired to national office. Dr. John W. Lawson was elected to Congress for two terms, 1888-1896, and declined a third term for reasons of health.~~

~~Lawson, born in James City County in 1837, had followed somewhat the same political course as his predecessors from Isle of Wight. He had been educated at the College of William and Mary, served as a surgeon with the Confederate States Army and represented Isle of Wight in the Virginia House of Delegates before being elected to Congress. He also represented the county in the Constitutional Convention of 1905, and was a member of the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary and of the Virginia Military Institute.~~

~~He was a practicing physician in Isle of Wight, where he had married Margaret Urquhart of an old county family. They owned and lived at the historic plantation, "The Rocks" on the James River for many years, and it was he who had built the house that is now the much enlarged and remodeled home of Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Pile.~~

~~Dr. Lawson's daughter, Violet, married Walker Pegram Warren, and they were the owners of "Bacon's Castle" in Surry and "Hayden Hall" in Smithfield until their deaths in 1973.~~

~~He died at his home in Smithfield (now the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Meador on Wharf Hill) in 1905, and on his monument in old Ivy Hill Cemetery is carved: "a lover of truth, honor and justice."~~

~~A fitting epitaph, we believe, for all of Isle of Wight's sons who held congressional office.~~
